Sarah Wright, Life Sciences Librarian for Research, University Library

Thursday, September 19, 2019 - 9:30-10:30am
Plant Science Building, Room 404

Synopsis

Starting October 1st, ORCID (Open Researcher and Contributor ID) will be required by NIH, CDC and AHRQ. At the September OSP Roundtable, we will provide an introduction to ORCID IDs and a discussion of where and how to obtain and make use of your ORCID ID. ORCID is a nonproprietary alphanumeric code used to uniquely identify scientific and other academic authors and contributors. Using this code addresses the problem that names alone are not unique, can be changed, have cultural differences in name order, and similar issues that arise when using names alone. ORCID is becoming the accepted standard for contributor identification in research and academic publishing. Cornell's Research Data Management Service Group (RDMSG) offers a comprehensive suite of data management planning and services for Cornell's faculty, staff and students. Join us for the ORCID introduction and an overview of the services the RDMSG offers, including some information on supporting data management plans, and updates on current funder and publisher requirements.

Zoom

For those unable to join us in person, attendance will be available via Zoom.
A link to the Zoom meeting will be sent the day before the Roundtable.
Neither requests for the link nor registration are required.

Materials and Recordings

All OSP Roundtable materials and records are available on the Cornell Research Services website –
